Mr. Jefferson Davis has returned from Canada to his home in Mississippi. A reporter caught him as he passed through Indianapolis shithward-bound, and asked him what he thought of General Sherman's criticisms upon the "Rise and Fall of the Southern Confederacy." Mr. Davis said: "I have read that remarkable rigmarole of General Sherman's, but I cannot see that it in any respect breaks the force of my statement. Sherman, as the lawyers say, confesses and avoids. To use another legal phrase, his defense is in the nature of a 'negative pregnant,' which contains, on its face, evidence of its falsity. In other words, it is a negation of one thing while implying an affirmation of another. History has already decided that Sherman burned Coalready decided that Sherman burned Co-lumbia, S. C., in the mere wantonness of war and to gratify a brutal spirit of re-venge against what they called 'the hot-bed of secession.' Sherman waged war with more ferocity than any soldier since Attila."

GENERAL WALKER has had the experience of every previous superintendent of the census in having his appropriation give out. Each census costs more than the last, and in a larger proportion than any one expected. The seventh census cost $1,329,027; the eighth, $1,922,272; the ninth, $3,336,511, Congress adding $685,000 in the last instance to the salaries paid on account of the into the salaries paid on account of the increase in prices between 1860 and 1870. In estimating the cost of the present census at $3,000,000, General Walker went as low as he could, lower than most men who had examined the subject thought was wise; but General Walker knew that it is easier to get ten deficiency appropriations of $100,000 from Congress than one original appropria-tion of $1,000,000. The collection of statisties of special industries has probably cost a good deal more than any one expected. The price paid the agents has been a good one, as was necessary, and the work done excel-lent; but the result is that the tenth census will probably cost about $4,000,000.

EDWARD TRICKETT, the Australian oars-man, arrived at New York from Europe on aturday, and was greeted by a number of is admirers. He was accompanied by his rainer, Henry Kelly. Trickett said he had of yet arranged any matckes in this coun-ry, but he was willing to row any one ex-cept Hanlan, and he did not care to tackle is pt Hanlan, and he did not care to tackle usin just yet. Kelly, who has Trickett in harge, said that no plans had been formed for his visit, but he expected that Trickett would render a good account of himself. He thought that a matsh would be made first between Trickett and Riley. Trickett would ow in any regatta that was open to him. He, himself, would like to go into a race if he could find any man of his age who wanted to row. Kelly, who is forty-nine years old, weighs about 170 pounds. He was champion of the Thames for years, until finally defeated by Renforth. He coached the Harvard crew for a short time before sheir race with Oxford. Trickett is six feet three inches in height and weighs about 175 three inches in height and weighs about 175 bounds. He was the champion of Australia or years, and he defeated the best English scullers in 1876. His last trip to England was a disastrons one, for he was defeated by both Ross and Hanlan. The Albany Bribery Case a Conspiracy.

Ex-Congressman Roberts' paper says of Bradley's charge that he was bribed; "The money which Speaker Sharpe has turned over to the sergeant-at-arms was never in the possession of Senator Sessions. It is money that was contributed by the recalcitrants, at the same time when Mr. Bradley reported that he had had a conversation with Sessions under circumstances which rendered it impossible to put forth such a story as has been invented to fit the case. We are aware that this view conveys a most grave accusation against men of whom we are most rejuctant to believe such devilight with the session when the mercury is a series of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals as to the methods of mercy that were to be extended to the brute creation when the mercury we are aware that this yiew conveys a most grave accusation against men of whom we are most reluctant to believe such devilish wickedness. But we are confronted by the desperate condition of the cause which they have sought to bolster in this manner. We know that every other resort to retrieve impending disaster has proved abortive. We know that the very thing we are compelled to charge these men with doing is not in itself, though a penal offense, more intrinsically wicked than their whole proceeding, in setting themselves doggedly to defy the will and wish of the party whose servants they are. The attempt of the Conkling members of the investigating committee to flood the country with Bradley's charges, while refusing to permit Sessions' denial to go hand in hand with it, was the final and conclusive evidence of the design and character of the plot that has so speedily miscarried. Only in that way could the conspirators have hoped for a temporary credence, which they in that way could the conspirators have hoped for a temporary credence, which they thought would last long enough to start a reaction against Mr. Depew. They have failed in that—failed utterly and ridiculously, as they have failed in everything else they have attempted. Will they now submit to the popular verdict; or shall we yet be regaled with other plots and conspiracies for a like purpose?—The Utica Herald. A Poor Opinion of the English Army.

Major-General Synge, of the British army, is now in New York. He is small of statis now in New York. He is small of stat-ure and slight figure, wears eyeglasses, and is apparently about fifty years of age. In conversation with a Tribiane reporter last week he was very emphatic in the expres-sion of his opinions as to the foriorn con-dition of the British army. He said that the men were of light weight and undersized, and that the impression seemed to prevail that one man was as good as another for a soldier. There was no unity of feeling between the officers and men, while the whole standard of the troops was much lower than formerly. Ever since the abolishment of the Duke of Wellington's rule, or perhaps since the Crimean war, the rule, or perhaps since the Crimean war, the English army has detegiorated. At present such a deplorable state of things existed that the officers were frequently made to appear ridiculous. The war with the Boers had been conducted in a most scandalous way, English officers and men being murdered under a flag of truce, and this almost with the connivance of English statesmen. The condition of Ireland being referred to, the General said: "The late administration warned the present one that there would be trouble if the 'peace act' was repealed, but to no avail. The act was repealed; the inhabitants immediately armed themselves, and now the British government has sent over troops to shoot down the inhabitants that it has been the means of arming."

How Bonn Platt's Star Route was Expedited.

We have, for example, a Star route in this happy valley. Jones—not our Jones, made famous by his dyspepsia and The Capital, but another Jones, equally disagreeable—carries a tri-weekly mail from Spring Hills, through West Liberty, Mac-o-cheek, to Pickereltown. Jones moves like the sun, so slowly that we have to sight him by stakes of the Virginia rail fence to know that he is Virginia rail fence to know that he is moving.

Now, I don't know, but judging from the mails of Spring Hills, Mac-o-cheek and Pickereltown, I doubt whether the Government gets enough to pay Jones and his polleviled, spavined, string-halted animated hat rack, let alone the three postmasters who, with spectacles on nose, sort over and distribute the wells.

The announcement that two horses will be put to the Herdic coaches is considered a triumph for which the society have worked persistently. Check reins have been abolished by the Herdic company, and the coaches are now walked up the hill by the Treasury Department, largely through the influence of these societies' agents, who are now keeping an eye on all the car horses in the city, the mules on the canal, and the horses employed by the brick yards. Special attention is given to the practice of crowding or cruelly tying calves, cows and other animals. Every case of tying the feet of a calf together, observed by the society, is promptly prosecuted, as well as those of rather an interesting episode occurred. BULL RUN RUSSELL, in a recent letter to Bull Run Russell, in a recent letter to the London Morning Post, says that Wash-ington has in a few years undergone greater changes for the better than any place in the United States. It is strange that Eng-lish travelers—at least, if we are to judge from recent books of travel—seldom come to a capital in every way worthy of into a capital in every way worthy of in-spection. In the two latest and best books of travel there is no mention of it at all. The Star Route Motive.

There never is a popular outburst of virtuous indignation over a public shorted uning that one does not find, if he looks closely techind it, a more vigorous incentive to prosecu-tion than patriotic zeal.

This row affords no exception. Were these now obnoxious star routes suppressed or cut down to a self-sustaining figure, the express companies would profit to the extent of millions.

Nearly three years since I was approached by a gentleman who called my attention to the unwarrantable encroachments of the government upon the private business of citizens in making the Post Office Department an express company. I saw at a glance the good sense and justice of the complaint; He was informed that the society are summoning additional forces and will make all effort to prevent all phases of cruelty; the various forms of overloading, fast driving and overworking animals during the summon mentals. The good sense and justice of the companies come honestly before Congress with a complaint of the outrage I should have been glad to aid in the reform. But we have survived the period of open reforms. The companies thought is approximately an example of the good sense and justice of the complaint; of open reform. The companies thought it wiser to assault in the rear, from under cover, and so drive the government to dropping at least a part of its express business. Honce these tears.—Down Piatt in Sanday had held a consultation to see whether there was any provision in the revised statutes, the common law, the code of Maryland as adopted for the District in 1801, the acts of the late featherduster legislature, or the ordimances of the extinct common coincil of Washington city, making the above describ-ed offense indictable.

It has since been rumored that "Room 59"
